

Excerpt from:

Breakfast and lunch have made a full recovery in the post-Katrina eating scene

by Brett Anderson, Restaurant writer, The Times-Picayune Friday August 28, 2009, 5:05 AM

...Steve Himelfarb signed the lease for the New Orleans Cake Cafe & Bakery on Katrina's second anniversary. It is lively in the mornings, with people traveling from well outside its home in the Marigny for the fresh-baked bagels, cinnamon rolls and bread, including challah. The kitchen roasts its own turkey breasts to pull for sandwiches at lunch....